The Grove Absinthe fountain experience

What is Absinthe?

*Absinthe is an anise-flavoured spirit derived from botanicals, including the flowers and leaves of Artemisia absinthium ("grand wormwood"), together with green anise, sweet fennel, and other medicinal and culinary herbs.*

History and Controversy

The origin of absinthe is lost in history. The medical use of wormwood dates back to ancient Egypt and is mentioned in the Ebers Papyrus, c. 1550 BC. Wormwood extracts and wine-soaked wormwood leaves were used as remedies by the ancient Greeks.

*Absinthe's popularity grew steadily through the 1840s, known as the "green fairy"; It was a direct result of the love affair that Parisian artists, poets, and playwrights had with the drink. The list of notable and enthusiastic absinthe drinkers include Vincent Van Gogh, Alfred Jarry, Jean Nicolas Arthur Rimbaud, Paul Celan, Pablo Picasso, Charles Pierre Baudelaire, and Ernest Hemingway, to name a few. Many of these artists geniuses implored absinthe's virtues in their younger years but damned its ravaging effects at the end of their lives. Absinthe was not just for artists and literaries; Parisians from all walks of life consumed a vast amount of the beverage during the last quarter of the nineteenth century through the first decade of the twentieth-century. The drink was so popular in Paris that 17:00 to 19:00 was known as the l'heure verte (the green hour). Popular belief held that absinthe expanded the consciousness, renewed brain activity, and help aphrodisiac qualities. Above all of this, however, was the power of the ritual.*

THE RITUAL

There are many ways to partake of absinthe, all of them providing a bit of ritual to go along with the potent intoxicants. The most traditional method of drinking absinthe (the one we practice here at The Grove) involves pacing a cube of sugar on an absinthe spoon. And drip some cold water from our traditional absinthe fountain.

*Dilution of the liqueur by the water yields an opaque opalescent green liquid, which shimmers in the glass. The turbidity or louche (pronounced "loosh") is produced by dissolution of the essential oils when the alcohol concentration is lowered.*

The refreshing, herbal, anised flavours makes for a perfect pre-dinner drink or you can also take your time in our lounge after dinner and experience the famous inebriating kiss of the green fairy.
